Client Stories

Enhancing market access for tourism operator

A young Inuit entrepreneur worked with a Catalyste+ tourism development Advisor who specializes in marketing and branding to develop business expansion strategies for his adventure travel company. The Catalyste+ Advisor guided him through developing a business plan, establishing regional networks and rebranding his company.

“Having a Catalyste+ expert to consult with about my goals and ideas saved me five years of work, and that’s only after talking with him for five hours.”

Kylik Kisoun Taylor
Founder, Tundra North Tours and Catalyste+ client

Improving business sustainability of a remote resort

A First Nations-owned hotsprings lodge and resort in a remote part of British Columbia closed due to high overhead costs and low profit in the off-season. The lodge is a critical source of employment and economic growth for the community.

A Catalyste+ Advisor with 35 years of experience in hotel management worked with the lodge’s staff to conduct a needs assessment and market analysis. The operational review led to recommendations on how the business could minimize off-season costs and improve marketing during the high season. As a result of these recommendations, the lodge was able to remain operational.

Developing a tourism plan for a First Nations in the North

Through a Catalyste+ mentorship program developed in partnership with the Government of Northwest Territories, a newly appointed tourism officer worked with a Catalyste+ Advisor to develop a vibrant tourism industry for her community.

They drafted a business plan for funding applications and developed a marketing strategy, including tourism products and services tailored to local traditions. Months later, they opened a Visitor Information Centre and Tourism Operations headquarters.
